Iran Issue May Come Up Again

DELEGATE FROM AUSTRALIA MAY REVIVE PROBLEM

Hodgson Charges Agreement Shows Assurances To UN 'Completely Hollow'

NEW YORK, April 6—A renewed attack by the Australian delegate on the United Nations security council's procedure in the Iranian crisis today threatened to blow off the lid which had been clamped on the case until May 6.

Col. W. R. Hodgson, the fiery, outspoken member from Australia, charged in a statement through his delegation's press officer, that the new Soviet-Iranian agreement demonstrated as "completely hollow" the declarations to the council that no negotiations were in progress.

Hodgson, who had given the council a verbal spanking at its meeting on Thursday for failing to make a full investigation of the facts in the Iranian case, planned to renew his attack when the council meets again Tuesday.

Bitter Out Statement. Australian circles said Hodgson would not press for a reopening of the case. Nevertheless, his outburst might throw the council into a bitter debate over the issues Hodgson intends to raise.

Hodgson, according to his associates, was particularly bitter over the statement made before the council by Iranian ambassador Hussein Ala that no oil negotiations could be carried on while Soviet or any other foreign troops were on Iran's soil.

The new Soviet-Iranian agreement provides for the withdrawal of troops by May 6, the formation of a Russian-Iranian oil company subject to ratification by the Iranian parliament, and the recognition of Azerbaijan's autonomy as an internal affair of the smaller power.

May Talk Tuesday. "It is likely," said an Australian source, "that the Australian delegation will have something to say Tuesday on this aspect—that the security council was used as an incident in a chain of political negotiations."

Hodgson's statement made no mention of his determination to restate his views on Tuesday. It said:

"The events of today have completely vindicated my attitude in the security council. Statements that no negotiations were in progress between Russia and Iran and statements that there could be no negotiations while Russian troops were in Iran are revealed as completely hollow by the oil agreement which could not possibly have resulted from negotiations undertaken except while the council has been considering the matter."

Tuesday's council meeting is scheduled only for the purpose of considering a report by its committee.

Police Hunt 'Gentleman' Ohio Bandit

YOUNGSTOWN, April 6—Police searched today for a suave, friendly gunman who robbed a Youngstown druggist of $130, kidnapped his pretty, 21-year-old daughter, then released her five hours later with the promise the money would be returned.

The girl, auburn-haired Patricia Smith, was released unharmed early today near East Liverpool, after riding around with the bandit for five hours, two of which were spent parked on a lonely country road while he waited for a woman companion.

Miss Smith, unruffled by the experience, told police the gunman made her ride to North Lima with her head in his lap. There he blindfolded her and drove around for several hours more before stopping on a remote section of the highway to wait for a woman companion who, he promised, would take her back to Youngstown.

Miss Smith and her father, Ivan Smith, were alone in the drugstore when the gunman entered. He rifled the cash register and then forced Smith to lie down in a back room.

Smith said he heard the bandit tell his daughter to come with him. He said he thought the gunman wanted to use her as a shield to get to his car and told her to "go ahead." When the car drove off, he called police. A police cordon was thrown around the city, but the bandit, who was driving a 1937 model automobile escaped.

Taylor And Thomas Chide U. S. For Stand On Foreign Problems

WASHINGTON, April 6—The win-the-peace conference—called "to checkmate the war moves"—entered its second day today with three Democratic congressmen slated to address some 800 delegates from all sections of the nation.

Reps. Adolph J. Sabath, Ill., and Charles R. Savage and Hugh De Lacy, both of Wash., were the scheduled congressional speakers. They were among 18 congressmen sponsoring the conference. Five representatives have withdrawn their sponsorship, apparently because of charges that the assembly has Communist backing.

Sabath, 80-year-old dean of the house, who announced the conference, has told reporters that he, too, would step out if the red influence claims were well-founded. Meantime, Sen. Glenn H. Taylor, D., Ida., keynoted the opening session last night by chiding the United States to make an all-out effort for peace.

Taylor said his so-called "great victory over Russia" at the current United Nations security council meeting in New York "came (Continued on Page Two)

Threat Of Coal Shortage Grows; 700,000 Are Idle

By United Press

The threat of a coal shortage was aggravated today as leaders of 400,000 striking coal miners rejected a proposal to end the walkout and let the government write a new union contract.

President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, (AFL) was disclosed to have rejected the suggestion to permit a government board to draft a new contract with the mine operators. Little hope was seen of an immediate settlement as the strike entered its sixth day.

More than 700,000 workers were idle in reconversion strikes and shutdowns. The major developments:

1. The senate approved a 65-cent national minimum hourly wage. The wage bill, which must be approved by the house, would raise the minimum hourly pay of 2,260,000 workers from the present 40-cent level.

2. Approximately 135,000 auto workers were idle because of a strike of 113 truck drivers against the Briggs Manufacturing company, Detroit, and partial shutdowns at General Motors and Ford Motor Corp.

3. Detroit's Mayor Edward J. Jeffries, Jr., proposed restoration of jitney service as the city's transportation strike went into its fifth day.

4. Conciliation conferences intended to avert a threatened strike against the Cincinnati, O., Gas & Electric Co., were recessed on reports that the walkout would not begin before Sunday.

5. Striking tugboat workers set up picket lines which tied up the port of Philadelphia.

6. Federal conciliators were hopeful that the strike of 30,000 employees of International Harvester (Continued on Page Two)

SOLONS FEAR LIVING COSTS MAY GO UP FAST

Amendments To Price Control Law May Result In Huge Increase

WASHINGTON, April 6—Administration congressmen warned today that living costs may be boosted $500,000,000 a year as a result of amendments to the price control law.

The house banking committee voted 15 to 4 yesterday to continue OPA another year until June 30, 1947, but wrote in an amendment restricting the agency's cost absorption program. The bill was expected to reach the house floor April 29.

Committee Chairman Brent Spence, D., Ky., said the committee's action would hike the cost of many consumer items, including automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines and other durable goods. New car prices may jump an average of $60, it was said.

Rep. A. S. "Mike" Monroney, D., Okla., also looked for price increases on some items but he said the threat of run-away inflation had been licked at least for the time being.

"We might have come out minus both arms and legs," he pointed out. "OPA could probably live with the bill as drawn."

The amendment which administration congress feared would result in a rise in living costs would guarantee dealers in durable consumer goods their historical discount or markup. OPA has compelled them to absorb part of recent price hikes.

The committee, however, voted down efforts to cut the government's subsidy program in half, remove controls on meat in the Fall, and turn rent controls over to any (Continued on Page Two)

PRESIDENT FEARS POSSIBLE CONFLICT IN MIDDLE EAST

Chief Executive, In Army Day Speech, Urges Unification of Armed Forces, Extension of Draft, Universal War Training

CHICAGO, April 6—President Truman today warned of possible conflict in the Middle East and declared the United States must gird itself to defend peace in an atomic era, if war comes, "we are likely to be the first target."

The President, in an Army day address at Soldier Field, restated basic U. S. foreign policy—world peace and security through a United Nations supported by American might.

He reminded that "no country is so remote from us that it may not some day be involved in a matter which threatens the peace."

He called anew for prompt unification of the armed forces in a single department, extension of selective service for another year beyond the presently scheduled May 15 expiration date, and adoption of universal training to prepare America for war, "if war unhappily should ever come again."

"Next time—if there must be a next time," the President said, "we are likely to be the first target."

He warned that international rivalry in the near and Middle East, if permitted to get out of hand, "might suddenly erupt into conflict." For that reason, he added, countries of those regions "must not be threatened by coercion or penetration."

Far East Watched. As for the Far East, Mr. Truman said, the United States wants peace and security there, too, and expects Russia, Great Britain and other nations interested in that part of the world "to pursue the same objectives."

The President named no names in his remarks on the Middle East. But backgrounding his warning was the now apparently settled dispute, aired recently before the United Nations security council, over Soviet troops in Iran. Russia has promised to get her forces out of the oil-rich little country by May 6.

Mr. Truman spoke after reviewing a mammoth parade in which 15,000 men and hundreds of tanks, jeeps, trucks, and planes took part. The country was celebrating Army day with parades for the first time since 1941. Other speakers here included Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff.

Patterson also called for universal training, declaring that it is "the only way" to insure national defense. Warning that there are "millions who hate us for our victory" in World War II, Patterson declared that "the peace we have won shall be held firmly."

Eisenhower decried "jingoism and saber rattling" but said America must protect its victory and plow up "the remaining weeds of Axis doctrines." He said the Army "believes in strength without arrogance; firmness without discourtesy; loyalty without servility."

President Truman said the Near and Middle East presented "grave problems" because of vast natural resources and convenient land, air and water transportation facilities. And the countries in which these resources and facilities lie, he noted, are not strong enough by themselves to withstand powerful aggression.

"It is easy to see, therefore," he said, "how the Near and Middle East might become an arena of intense rivalry between outside powers, and how such rivalry might suddenly erupt into conflict."

"No country, great or small, has legitimate interests in the Near and Middle East which cannot be reconciled with the interests of other nations through the United Nations."

"The United Nations have a right to insist that the sovereignty and integrity of the countries of the Near and Middle East must (Continued on Page Two)

U. S. Secretary Proposes Big Four Foreign Ministers Meet This Month

WASHINGTON, April 6—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes today awaited replies from London, Paris and Moscow on his proposal for a big four foreign ministers meeting to pave the way for the Paris peace conference May 1.

Byrnes proposed in a formal memorandum to Britain, France and Russia that the foreign ministers meet in Paris April 25, six days before the scheduled conference, to work out preliminary drafts of treaties with former Axis satellites.

(A foreign office spokesman in London said that Britain had accepted Byrnes' proposal.)

His action indicated that this government, contrary to Russia's position, feels that the Paris conference can be held as scheduled. The Moscow agreement called for final treaties not later than May 1 with Italy, Hungary, Romania, Finland and Bulgaria.

At the same time, it apparently represented a retreat from the previous positions of the United States and British governments. (Continued on Page Two)

U. S. AWAITS TRANS-JORDAN REPORT REQUEST

WASHINGTON, April 6—The state department today awaited formal request for a full report on whether Britain violated any agreements in granting independence to the Trans-Jordan section of her Palestine mandate.

Sen. Francis J. Myers D., Pa., said last night that he would ask such a report after he charged in a senate speech that the action violated agreements with the United States, the United Nations and the now defunct League of Nations.

If the state department does not explain satisfactorily why it does not protest the British action, Myers said, "we'll go further and ask that the matter be brought before the United Nations." The state department declined to comment.

MINIMUM WAGE BILL TO HOUSE

Administration Leaders In Hopes Revisions Will Be Made To Avert Veto

WASHINGTON, April 6—Senate administration leaders looked to the house today to salvage the battered 65-cent minimum wage bill from an almost certain Presidential veto.

Ignoring President Truman's veto threat, the senate bowed to a farm state coalition and drove through the bill still carrying a rider providing for an across-the-board hike in farm prices.

The final bill, which promptly was dubbed a "legislative cadaver" by some members, would increase the national minimum wage from 40 to 65 cents an hour. But it also would require the government to consider farm labor costs in figuring support prices.

It was that latter provision which last week prompted Mr. Truman to inform the senate that he would be forced to veto the bill unless it were removed.

The rebellious senate went ahead and wrote the amendment into the bill anyway. Then, as if

The increase was in line with higher consumer prices granted retailers on many pork and beef cuts as a result of a general wage increase to the nation's meat packers.

SENATOR SAYS HE WILL PROBE SURPLUS SETUP

WASHINGTON, April 6—Sen. Tom Stewart, D. Tenn., fearful that surplus war property disposal is building into a scandal that will rival the Tea Pot Dome Oil case, has decided to investigate the entire program.

Stewart released a telegram from Chattanooga, Tenn., veterans groups demanding an investigation into the fact that a New York department store recently advertised 600 new Studebaker trucks it had purchased from the Army ordnance depot at Terre Haute, Ind.

"Of course they were purchased by a dealer and sold at a big profit—to the hurt of war veterans," Stewart said. He added that veterans have been "pushed about, falsified to, misled, deceived and plotted against."

DENVER, April 6—A shoe clerk and his wife, who offered two of their infant triplet daughters for adoption, had so many offers of help today they were undecided which to accept.

The young couple had offered two of the 14-month-old triplets for adoption because the father's income was too limited to support them properly, and the mother's health too fragile to let her care for them.

Neighboring women scrubbed the floors of the Du Mars' four-room apartment in a federal housing project today, however, and did the family washing.

For that reason, he added, countries of those regions "must not be threatened by coercion or penetration."

Far East Watched
As for the Far East, Mr. Truman said, the United States wants peace and security there, too, and expects Russia, Great Britain and other nations interested in that part of the world "to pursue the same objectives."

The President named no names in his remarks on the Middle East. But backgrounding his warning was the now apparently settled dispute, aired recently before the United Nations security council, over Soviet troops in Iran. Russia has promised to get her forces out of the oil-rich little country by May 6.

Mr. Truman spoke after reviewing a mammoth parade in which 15,000 men and hundreds of tanks, jeeps, trucks, and planes took part. The country was celebrating Army day with parades for the first time since 1941. Other speakers here included Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff.

Patterson Urges Training
Patterson also called for universal training, declaring that it is "the only way" to insure national defense. Warning that there are "millions who hate us for our victory" in World War II, Patterson declared that "the peace we have won shall be held firmly."

Eisenhower decried "jingoism and saber rattling" but said America must protect its victory and plow up "the remaining weeds of Axis doctrines." He said the Army "believes in strength without arrogance; firmness without discourtesy; loyalty without servility."

The secretary said the Army has responsibilities that can be faced only if the American public give it the same support that enabled it to win two world wars in a generation.

LAFOLLETTE TO SEEK REELECTION AS REPUBLICAN

WASHINGTON, April 6—Sen. Robert LaFollette, P., Wis., said today he would seek re-election as a Republican to spearhead a drive for progressive principles within that party.

LaFollette said in a radio interview that if elected, he would take part in a fight for GOP sponsorship of liberal legislation and seek party control by men with "a progressive outlook."

If his bid for the Republican senatorial nomination fails, he said he would retire from the senate. Elected to the senate four times as a progressive, LaFollette recently led a move to reaffiliate his party with the GOP.

He explained that his primary aim in originally leaving the Republican party was to bring about a political realignment, but that the effort through the years has failed. As a result, LaFollette declared, "we believe we can best achieve our progressive principles" by returning to the GOP.

Sees Grave Problems
President Truman said the Near and Middle East presented "grave problems" because of vast natural resources and convenient land, air and water transportation facilities. And the countries in which these resources and facilities lie, he noted, are not strong enough by themselves to withstand powerful aggression.

"It is easy to see, therefore," he said, "how the Near and Middle East might become an arena of intense rivalry between outside powers, and how such rivalry might suddenly erupt into conflict."

"No country, great or small, has legitimate interests in the Near and Middle East which cannot be reconciled with the interests of other nations through the United Nations."

"The United Nations have a right to insist that the sovereignty and integrity of the countries of the Near and Middle East must (Continued on Page Two)

Mr. Truman added that if peace is to be preserved and strengthened in the Near and Middle East, "we cannot be content merely to assure self-government and independence."

"The people of the Near and Middle East want to develop their resources, widen their educational opportunities, and raise their standards of living," he said. "The United States will do its part in helping bring this about."

In his discussion of the Far East, Mr. Truman forthrightly stated what this country expects from other interested nations.

"We recognize that the Soviet Union, the British commonwealth and other nations have important interests in the Far East," he said.

"In return we expect recognition by them that we also have an interest in maintaining peace and security in that area."

"We expect understanding on their part that our objectives are dedicated to the pursuit of peace; and we shall expect them to pursue the same objectives."

Mr. Truman prefaced his discussion of unification, draft extension, and universal training with this statement:

Must Remain Strong

"The United States today is a strong nation; there is none stronger."

"We are determined to remain strong... because only so long as we remain strong can we ensure the peace of the world."

"Peace," he said "has to be built on power for good. Justice and good will and good deeds are not enough. We cannot one day proclaim our intention to prevent unjust aggression and oppression in the world, and on the next day call for immediate scrapping of our military might."

Draft extension—"wars are different from baseball games where, at the end of the game, the teams get dressed and leave the park. In wars, the victors must make sure that there will not be a recurrence of enemy aggression and tyranny."

"... The process is long and exacting. It requires an army of many men. And that army... can be continuously and adequately supplied for another year only by the selective service act."

Two Alternatives

Mr. Truman said that if congress fails to extend the draft, these alternatives are faced:

1. "We shall have to keep men indefinitely in foreign lands, who, by reason of long service, are justly entitled to come home to their families."

2. "Or we shall turn our backs upon the enemy before the victory is finally assured."

"Justice to the men still in the armed forces, justice to all our people and to civilization itself, forbids the choice of either of these alternatives," he said. "And the congress, I am sure, will not choose either."

"Not Conscription"

Universal training—it is "not conscription" but training.

"It does not mean that our young men would have to serve in the Army or Navy for any period during peacetime," he said. "What is proposed is that each individual be trained and fitted by his nation to take his place if war unhappily should ever come again. It is no answer to say that we do not need a large army in the ing of thanks and congratulations "to those soldiers who brought honor and victory to our colors."

"To the memory of those who lie in heroes' graves in a score of foreign lands, those of us still in the army pledge ourselves to perpetuation of the ideals for which they gave their lives," Eisenhower said.

Under Secretary of War Kenneth C. Royall stressed the need for continuation of cooperation between the military and civilian "so well demonstrated during the past five years." He praised the "men and women who produced the goods that made the victory possible."

The Navy too paid tribute to the Army.

Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, commander, U. S. Marine Corps, sent a tribute from the Marine corps to the Army as "brothers-in-arms."

Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal stressed the unity between the Army and Navy "unsurpassed in history" during World War II and sent the Army a "well done."

Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, chief of naval operations, said the services should in peace seek to foster the mutual cooperation developed during the war.

ter company would be settled today. The company and the United Farm Equipment Workers, (CIO), have agreed on most issues, including an 18-cent hourly wage increase, and were meeting to write a new contract.

The coal dispute has closed the nation's soft coal mines for six days and forced sharp curtailment of steel and auto production.

Edward R. Burke, president of the Southern Coal Producer's Association, said that Lewis "brushed aside with scorn" a compromise plan offered by the industry at a closed bargaining conference.

Burke charged that Lewis deliberately was stalling because he did not think the time was ripe to start serious negotiations to end the walkout, called over union demands for new safety regulations and health benefits.

At Detroit, truck drivers belonging to the CIO auto workers union reportedly struck against Briggs, manufacturer of auto bodies, over seniority provisions of a new contract.

Negotiations between the city of Detroit and the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric and Railway Employees (AFL) were resumed in an effort to halt a strike by 5,200 workers.

If Hodgson carries out his intentions on Tuesday, there was a possibility that Gromyko might refuse to stay and perhaps take another walk.

Disturbing Factors

There were several other developments which tended to make it an uneasy weekend for the council. A Yugoslav embassy spokesman in Washington said that his country has no intention of withdrawing its sponsoring of Albania as a candidate for UN membership. The application is still pending before the security council. Russia favors Albania's admission and Britain is opposed.

MAN FINED $50 IN THEFT PARK METER POSTS

Wallace Fullen, 27, Route 2, Williamsport, admitted Friday afternoon in the court of Mayor Ben H. Gordon that he stole seven parking meter posts the night of March 28 from the south side of West Main street between Scioto street and Western avenue.

Mayor Gordon fined Fullen $50 plus $12.10 costs. Fullen paid the cash and was released. He had been arrested Thursday on West Main street near the scene of the parking standard theft by Patrolmen Carl Radcliff and Turney Ross.

Fullen declared in court that he didn't know what became of the seven five and one-half foot metal posts valued at $10.50. The charge against Fullen was filed by Police Chief W. F. McCrady.

Service Director Clarence Helvering had branded the post-stealing as an act of vandalism. The standards were removed only a few hours after they had been imbedded in fresh concrete which had not yet hardened. The meters had not yet been installed atop the standards.

Anne Louise Horney And C. E. Higgins Wed In Columbus

On Thursday at 5:30 p. m. Miss Anne Louise Horney, Chillicothe, and Charles Edwin Higgins, Bainbridge were united in marriage at the First Community church, Columbus. The Rev. James Davis, performed the service in the presence of relatives and intimate friends who were seated in the choir pews. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Haynes, Bainbridge, brother-in-law and sister of the bridegroom, served as matron of honor and best man.

Miss Horney wore for her wedding a traveling suit of lime-green tulle, sheer ivory blouse with touches of lace, a small black hat trimmed with pink flowers, and black accessories. Her only jewelry was a double strand of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. A pink orchid was worn on the jacket of her suit.

Following the ceremony Edward Lewis Horney, father of the bride, entertained at a four-course dinner in the Wallick suite of the Deshler hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Watt, North Court street, were among the small group of intimate friends who attended the wedding and reception. Mrs. Watt and the new Mrs. Higgins were school mates at Columbus School for Girls and later both were employed by the

not be threatened by coercion or penetration."

Peace Must Be Preserved

Mr. Truman added that if peace is to be preserved and strengthened in the Near and Middle East, "we cannot be content merely to assure self-government and independence."

"The people of the Near and Middle East want to develop their resources, widen their educational opportunities, and raise their standards of living," he said. "The United States will do its part in helping bring this about."

In his discussion of the Far East, Mr. Truman forthrightly stated that this country expects from other interested nations.

"We recognize that the Soviet Union, the British commonwealth and other nations have important interests in the Far East," he said.

"In return we expect recognition by them that we also have an interest in maintaining peace and security in that area."

"We expect understanding on their part that our objectives are dedicated to the pursuit of peace; and we shall expect them to pursue the same objectives."

Mr. Truman prefaced his discussion of unification, draft extension, and universal training with this statement:

Must Remain Strong

"The United States today is a strong nation; there is none stronger."

"We are determined to remain strong... because only so long as we remain strong can we ensure the peace of the world."

"Peace," he said, "has to be built on power for good. Justice and good will and good deeds are not enough. We cannot one day proclaim our intention to prevent unjust aggression and oppression in the world, and on the next day call for immediate scrapping of our military might."

Draft extension—"wars are different from baseball games where, at the end of the game, the teams get dressed and leave the park. In wars, the victors must make sure that there will not be a recurrence of enemy aggression and tyranny."

"... The process is long and exacting. It requires an army of many men. And that army... can be continuously and adequately supplied for another year only by the selective service act."

Two Alternatives

Mr. Truman said that if Congress fails to extend the draft, these alternatives are faced:

1. "We shall have to keep men indefinitely in foreign lands, who, by reason of long service, are justly entitled to come home to their families."

atomic age. No one knows yet precisely what we shall need—in terms of infantry, artillery, pilots, paratroopers, ships, radar, planes, rockets or bombs.

"We do know this: modern war calls for total mobilization of all men and all energies. We know, too, that we are not likely again to be given two years or more by heroic allies to get ready. Next time—if there must be a next time—we are likely to be the first target."

"And so on short notice, each man must be ready to take his place and go forward—not at the end of a few months, or a few years, but immediately. Otherwise it may be too late."

In reviewing American foreign policy the President stuck to the fundamentals he announced last Navy day in New York.

No Selfish Motive

He said American foreign policy was "based squarely upon the pursuit of peace and justice; and it definitely rejects any selfish advantage for ourselves."

"The immediate objective of our foreign policy is to support the United Nations to the utmost," he declared.

Pledging continuing American aid to Europe, the President said "we know that we ourselves cannot enjoy prosperity in a world of economic stagnation."

He reiterated the good neighbor policy in this hemisphere in an around-the-world review of current conditions.

"The United States," he said, "intends to join with the other sovereign republics of America in a regional pact to provide a common defense against attack."

He did not, however, say whether this regional pact would include Argentina.

The President spoke only briefly about atomic energy and the problems it poses. He said it was this nation's desire to see that the new atomic power is harnessed to serve and not destroy mankind.

Not Pessimistic

"I am not pessimistic about the future," the President said in conclusion.

"I have confidence that there is no international problem which cannot be solved if there are the will and strength to solve it through the United Nations which we have all created."

In connection with the immediate occasion of his address, Mr. Truman emphasized that the victorious American army in the recent war was a civilian army. It found its reward not only in victory, he said, but in the survival of a free civilization.

He also paid tribute to his late predecessor, President Roosevelt, for his wartime leadership and inspiration to the army.

FELLOW DOCTORS HEAR TALK BY DR. H. D. JACKSON

Dr. H. D. Jackson described some of his experiences in World Wars I and II at a monthly meeting of the Pickaway County Medical Society which followed a noon luncheon, Friday, in the Betz Restaurant.

Dr. Jackson discussed graphically the hospitalization procedure in both field and base hospitals. During World War II he was instrumental in the construction of Army hospitals in many sections of the United States.

Safety Director Thurman Miller told the assembled doctors about the decision of the city council to purchase a new X-ray for Berger hospital.

It was decided to continue the monthly sessions of the organization through the Summer months. Guest physicians at the meeting were Dr. A. F. Kaler, New Holland, and Dr. M. D. Gamble, Williamsport.

ter company would be settled today. The company and the United Farm Equipment Workers, (CIO), have agreed on most issues, including an 18-cent hourly wage increase, and were meeting to write a new contract.

The coal dispute has closed the nation's soft coal mines for six days and forced sharp curtailment of steel and auto production.

Edward R. Burke, president of the Southern Coal Producer's Association, said that Lewis "brushed aside with scorn" a compromise plan offered by the industry at a closed bargaining conference.

Burke charged that Lewis deliberately was stalling because he did not think the time was ripe to start serious negotiations to end the walkout, called over union demands for new safety regulations and health benefits.

At Detroit, truck drivers belonging to the CIO auto workers union reportedly struck against Briggs, manufacturer of auto bodies, over seniority provisions of a new contract.

Negotiations between the city of Detroit and the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric and Railway Employees (AFL) were resumed in an effort to halt a strike by 5,200 workers.

Vice President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) also charged that the United States is "ganging up with Great Britain against Russia" and called for substitution of "an American foreign policy."

He said that "labor holds its nose" at Mr. Truman's appointment of Herbert Hoover as honorary chairman of the famine emergency committee.

MAN CHARGES NEGLECT IN SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Declaring that his wife neglected her home and made daily visits to beer parlors, Lawrence Arledge South Bloomfield, filed suit for divorce in Pickaway county common pleas court, Friday, accusing Mrs. Anna E. Arledge, South Bloomfield, of gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty. He also asks the court to grant him the custody of their five-year-old adopted daughter, Charlotte.

Judge Emmitt L. Crist issued a temporary injunction restraining Mrs. Arledge from molesting her husband in the care of the child during the pendency of the suit. Arledge says in his petition that they were married January 8, 1937.

If Hodgson carries out his intentions on Tuesday, there was a possibility that Gromyko might refuse to stay and perhaps take another walk.

Disturbing Factors

There were several other developments which tended to make it an uneasy weekend for the council. A Yugoslav embassy spokesman in Washington said that his country has no intention of withdrawing its sponsoring of Albania as a candidate for UN membership. The application is still pending before the security council. Russia favors Albania's admission and Britain is opposed.

The bill then would have to go to a conference committee of the two houses where there would be some hope the senate conferees could be persuaded to retreat from their position.

MAN FINED $50 IN THEFT PARK METER POSTS

Wallace Fullen, 27, Route 2, Williamsport, admitted Friday afternoon in the court of Mayor Ben H. Gordon that he stole seven parking meter posts the night of March 28 from the south side of West Main street between Scioto street and Western avenue.

Mayor Gordon fined Fullen $50 plus $12.10 costs. Fullen paid the cash and was released. He had been arrested Thursday on West Main street near the scene of the parking standard theft by Patrolmen Carl Radcliff and Turney Ross.

Fullen declared in court that he didn't know what became of the seven five and one-half foot metal posts valued at $10.50. The charge against Fullen was filed by Police Chief W. F. McCrady.

Even if the Soviet agree to the foreign ministers meeting, it was believed they might suggest postponing the peace conference until later in May. That would give the diplomats additional time to work out any differences which might arise.

The Russians already have informed France they see no point in going ahead with the conference until the big four are in complete agreement. It was said they see the Paris conference merely as a formal device for ratifying the agreements reached previously by the big four.

NAMES AND FAME

FAMILIES, like individuals, are sometimes better remembered for their defects than for the good deeds they have done. The Esterhazys, whose large estates the Russians are breaking up, are one of Hungary's great families, dating back to the 13th century. They have included generals and diplomats, and have always been high in the counsels of the government. They are known to musicians as patrons of that art. Yet the best known member was none of these, but the scapegrace who figured in the Dreyfus case.

In this case, which almost destroyed the French Republic in the 1890's, Maj. Alfred Dreyfus, a Jew, was accused of having sold military secrets to Germany, and on the strength of a document which he was supposed to have written, was convicted and sent to the horrible prison camp of Devil's Island.

Many who came in contact with the case were not convinced of his guilt, and finally succeeded in gaining a new trial. Ultimately Dreyfus was freed of all charges, and the high army officers who framed him to protect their own infallibility committed suicide or were otherwise disgraced. The document in the case was proved to have been written by Maj. Walstein Esterhazy of the famous Hungarian family, who had become a French officer. Esterhazy fled to England, where he died in 1923.

Thus one scoundrel can taint an honored name.

WAITING FOR COLLEGE

THIS year's high school seniors are running into a new problem. They and their parents have expected them to go directly to college after graduation, but suddenly they find that getting admitted to a college is not so simple as it used to be.

The torrent of veterans who want more education has already flooded to overflowing campuses in every state, and the movement has just begun. As a result, colleges which used to be tolerant of mediocre high school academic marks have jerked up their standards and will admit only top students. Many state universities have established a policy of admitting only residents of their own states. Everywhere standards have been tightened in the attempt to keep the size of student bodies from bursting the seams of institutional facilities.

It is a new and somewhat baffling idea to the high school graduates that they may have to wait a year or so before going to college. Actually, the college experience will probably mean even more to them a year hence, and a job in the meantime will give them a chance to build up an extra fund for the purpose. This delay is a small matter compared with the three or four-year delay of veterans who spent the usual college years at war.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 6—While the Soviet seems to be leisurely withdrawing its military army from Iran, it is leaving behind a political army which has an excellent chance of absorbing the country, as Britain and the U. S. have no armies on the ground, military or political.

Next possible Russian move may be to cut the nearest slice of Turkey already defined in the official Moscow journals. This is a thin slice running about 200 miles westward in length along the Black Sea with a depth of 75 to 100 miles inland. The Turks could not stop such a move without naval assistance from the British or us. Their frontier armies could easily be bypassed by Russian amphibious landings in their rear.

A late grapevine report to trustworthy authorities here indicates Russia is in no condition to try this, or any other major venture. Her casualty list from the war has not yet been published and no one knows how many she lost, although military men start their guesses at the astonishing total of 10,000,000 killed and their estimates run up to 20,000,000. At minimum, she is suffering a manpower shortage, made acute by critical shortages of farm tractors, locomotives and trucks to an extent where she cannot hope to supply her people with food and necessities. Economists noted Stalin's goals for the fourth five year plan, to end in 1950, were lower than his 1942 goals in pig iron, steel, oil, locomotives, freightcars, paper, leather and some other phases. In short, his figures suggest he will fall short of pre-war production after four more years—if figures can be trusted.

The formidable military line he is maintaining against us through western Hungary and northern Yugoslavia, with an advance outpost at Vienna, has been considered by some American military authorities to be a threat to us, but now they are beginning to wonder if it is not a sign of Russian weakness at home. Nearly 2,000,000 Russian troops were recently reported in this line of defense-in-depth—500,000 in Austria where no more than 50,000 could be used policing, if that many; 1,200,000 in back-up positions across Hungary and 250,000 Russian and Yugoslav troops facing the British a few miles back from the border of that nation. (How many additional millions the Russians have in Germany, Poland, Rumania and Bulgaria, no one knows, but our whole army around the world is probably now half the total Russian force.)

These Russian dispositions plainly suggest a defensive line to prevent invasion of the Balkans by United British and American forces. It has no other military value. But it could be adequately manned for such a purpose with one fourth the present forces. Why, then, is it there?

The answer commonly accepted on the inside here now is that Stalin cannot feed so many at home. His occupation army is bitterly resented in Hungary where it recently cut down its seizures of supplies from the people, but he has refused all our efforts for retrenchment and it is still taking food from the needy. Strangely, by leaving such a great force so long at the front, he has complicated his manpower problem at home. Demobilized they could work.

Of course this is not the first indication of Soviet socialist inefficiency. The Russians always solve their economic problems the political way, which seldom proves to be the right economic way. Hence, Russia can now be sending ships.

DIET AND HEALTH

Allergy As Disease-Producer

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MORE and more, doctors are coming to believe that allergy may play a primary role in producing disease. Allergy simply means individual over-sensitiveness to substances which are usually harmless. In other words, one person's body tissues may be irritated or even poisoned by something which leaves another perfectly sound.

Recently, Dr. Henry L. Williams of the Mayo Clinic has suggested that the distressing Meniere's Disease may be due to an allergy. This may prove a very hopeful theory because in the past, doctors have sought in vain for satisfactory treatment of this peculiar affliction.

Recurrent Dizziness

Occurring as a rule only in persons over 30 years of age, Meniere's Disease causes recurrent attacks of dizziness, in which objects seem to rotate, with temporary deafness in one ear, vomiting and a condition of the eyes known as nystagmus in which the eyes jerk rapidly to one side and then return slowly to the normal position.

Dr. Williams believes that as a result of some allergy, the tissues of the internal ear become swollen and this, in turn, brings on the symptoms of Meniere's Disease.

He finds support for his idea in the fact that during an attack, patients exhibit an abnormal craving for salt, indicating that something has upset the body's metabolism, the basic process by which food and necessary liquids are turned into energy.

New Treatment

His new concept of Meniere's Disease led him to a new treatment. A number of patients were given niacin and potassium nitrate with lessening of the amount of salt and fluid in their diets. Niacin is a part of the vitamin B-complex. Of 62 patients treated for Meniere's disease, 50 were relieved of their symptoms merely by administering the niacin. When the salts and fluids in the diet were reduced and potassium nitrate given, those who are not relieved by the niacin alone, were benefited.

Doctor Williams suggests that the niacin be given by injection under the skin starting with a moderate sized dose and gradually increasing the quantity. The fluids are restricted to the equivalent of six glassfuls of water a day.

Gradual Deafness

Doctor Williams has found that in patients with Meniere's disease, deafness may gradually occur and that, at the same time, the patient develops such symptoms as running of the nose and severe headache. Whether or not the condition is due to an allergy, it would seem that the method of treatment proposed brings benefit to many patients.

It must be remembered, also, that not all persons who suffer from attacks of dizziness and deafness are suffering from Meniere's disease. These symptoms may be produced by other disorders affecting the internal ear, as well as a number of nervous disorders.

However, when these symptoms occur, a careful study should be made to determine if they are due to Meniere's disease, in which event the treatment suggested would appear worth trying.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. A.: I have a fluttering feeling in the hollow of my throat at times. Could this be gas on my stomach or is it due to a heart condition?

Answer: The condition you describe is probably due to nervousness. It is probably no cause for great concern. It is not due to gas on the stomach or any heart condition.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

POLLY REMAINED stubborn and kept twittering about his "honorable" and "discreet" and "gentlemanly" and "discreet" and ended, with more firmness than I'd given him credit for: "I am deeply distressed that one of my best clients has been murdered, almost at my door. But I refuse to be dragged deeper into this crime. I won't say another word, no matter what you do to me. Please let me go back to my apartment. I do not feel very well."

"In a little while," the inspector promised. "After you've had a last look at the deceased. Seeing you knew her so well I should think you'd want to."

"The prospect made Polly shake with horror. 'No! Please! I'd rather not!' he assured his tormentor. 'Is she still in there?'"

He cocked his head in the direction of the guest room when he asked the question. And Inspector Barry answered: "No, in there! jerking his thumb toward Neal's room and grabbing poor little Polly's arm with his other hand at the same time. 'Come along, say goodbye to your late customer.'"

"Polly came along. But only because he couldn't help it. Dragging his feet like an unwilling child, he protested: 'But I don't want to see her!' And: 'You are taking me to Mademoiselle Tarrant's room. Why? Madame Ingalls couldn't have been killed in there, why should she?'"

"That's what we all would like to know," Inspector Barry threw the door wide. "Remove the sheet," he told a policeman stationed inside.

Hunt and I had followed him, and the four of us stood silently looking at the dead Margot, who was still clutching the rose-colored pillow.

Polly made a choking sound and crossed himself. "How was she killed?" he gulped out at last. "Stabbed with a paper knife from the desk there," the inspector said tersely.

"But—but there isn't any blood." "Happens that way sometimes. Internal bleeding," Hunt vouchsafed, a shade less coldly than before.

"Oh! . . . And why is she holding that pillow?"

Polly was asking all the questions that were puzzling me. "A accident," the inspector shrugged. "Must have grabbed it in falling. They'll pull it out of her hand when they—take her away."

Grabbed at the pillow in falling? My eyes went to the bed-divan with its heaps of cushions. Neal didn't like rose. That's why she had given me one of the deep rose pillows, and kept the other hidden—well hidden—way back in a corner. To my intense relief Inspector Barry had no immediate chance of taking up his "comfortable talk" with me again after Polly, and left him the remaining press, had left.

First, poor Margot's body was being removed. Then Hunt produced Claire, who went into a graphic recital of the murdered woman's past, which led to much jolting down of addresses, facts and approximate dates by Mullins. And later, just as I thought I was in for it again, Dick arrived, surprisingly, accompanied by his father.

The old gentleman was in a towering rage and quite plainly regarded Margot Ingalls' murder as a direct attack against the existence of his expected grandchild. Anyway, he demanded no less than complete suppression of all publicity concerning it, and came near having apoplexy when the inspector informed him calmly that the press had already been there and gone, and the violent end of the popular authoress would most likely be headlined in the afternoon papers.

In the end his wrath turned against me. "It was all my fault. The sister of his son's wife had no business to live, all by herself, in this miserable tenement without doorman or elevator attendant, where anyone could walk in from the street and murder people."

"I won't allow it any longer," he stormed at me. "Pack your things and come out to Elmpoint with us. At once! And stay there till this incredible scandal blows over."

"I'll throw a cordon of guards around the estate," he went on, "and no newspaper or reporter through it," he promised the inspector, and then threatened me: "And I'll kill you, so help me, if you breathe a word about this to Dita."

After a good half hour of raving he calmed down and listened to reason. The outcome was the decision that Dick should return to Elmpoint at once, break the news to Dita as gently as possible, and induce her to call me on the phone, so that I could take over his good work, acting cheerful and unconcerned.

My leaving town and hiding out in Elmpoint was, of course, out of the question. The police needed me, Inspector Barry and Hunt assured the worried old gentleman.

However, they shared his objection to my staying in the apartment alone with Rosa, and greeted with enthusiasm Claire's offer to move into the guest room, as soon as the police were through ransacking Margot's possessions for evidence.

Also, they agreed that the house service, as it was now, didn't afford sufficient protection.

Inspector Barry promised that, from this hour on, no one would be able to enter, or leave, the Lincolnfield without the knowledge of the law. The premises were to be watched, in three shifts, the clock around and, to make the presence of the police less obvious, doorman's uniforms were to be procured for the watchers. At the expense of Richard Pearce, Sr.

After all this had been decided, Dick, his father, Inspector Barry and Hunt all left in a bunch, and Claire and I sat down before the fireplace, too exhausted to utter a word, until, after a while, Rosa came in to inquire if we wanted her to bring us some food.

Talking of food, after the tragedy of food, after the tragedy, actually seemed a little indecent. But the very word "lunch" had a reviving effect and soon we were eating.

Afterwards, when Rosa had removed the trays, we both kicked off our shoes and curled up—Claire on the sofa, I in the deep chair opposite it, trying to relax and rest up for the next instalment of the inquisition, which was sure to come in the afternoon.

"Nice retired way to torture, our police system," Claire said drowsily. "Did you break down and tell the boys what they ought to write about Margot?"

"I did not," I boasted. "Hell and high water won't make me hand Deane over to them. And neither will Hunt Berwick."

"Hm, yes. Hunt. Appropriate name the lad has," Claire yawned. "Also a swell physique and a face you'd love to touch."

It sounded funny from Claire. "I'm surprised! YOU falling for our psychological sleuth!" I teased her with a weak chuckle, and then, ashamed of being amused by anything under the circumstances, cuddled deeper into my chair in search of the ideal position.

Something crackled as I moved. I put my hand down between the loose cushion and the back of the chair to see what had made the sound, and suddenly sat up straight, my stockings feet on the floor and every trace of drowsiness gone.

In my hand was a thin heap of letters, held together by an ordinary rubber band. Letters in Margot Ingalls' familiar hand, written on her equally familiar thin, stiff notepaper.

Today's Horoscope

A birthday today means that you read a great deal and enjoy good literature. You are a good conversationalist, but do not care for light talk. You are quite domestic, and live very much within yourself. You are well liked for you are an interesting and entertaining person. Any change you might make early this morning would be permanent; don't start any important project at this time. Around 8 a. m. you can start the day with a smile. West put up a pretty defense against this contract. After leading his spade K and seeing the dummy, he immediately switched to the diamond J. South let it run to his K, then laid down the heart A and K, leaving the good Q out against him.

Next he led the spade 7, expecting West to come in with the marked A. If he had, the spade Q and J would then have been set up for discards of the club Q and 5. The diamond 7 could have been ruffed, so that the only tricks lost would have been two in spades and one to the heart Q.

But West did not play his A on that second round of spades. He sized up South as having held only two spades originally. If that was right, playing the A would have given South his contract. So West played low on the 7, and the Q won in dummy. Now West's A was doomed never to take a trick. But that play beat South's contract, as he now could not get any discards of clubs. As a result, the declarer lost two tricks in clubs, in addition to one in spades and one in hearts, so was set one.

General Sees No Reason | Price Control Extension
For Support of the Navy | To Be Bitterly Opposed

Special to Central Press

● HOLLYWOOD—Gen. Carl Spaatz, new Army Air Force chief, is a bitter, outspoken foe of the Navy and especially the Naval Air Force.

At a private dinner in Washington recently, Spaatz attacked the Navy in an "off-the-record" speech in which he told a group of aviation writers that he saw no reason why Congress should spend any money on the Navy.

It happened that a Navy admiral of lower rank than Spaatz was sitting at the head table when the general fired his broadside at the Navy. Of course, the admiral made his report to his superiors and the tension between the Army and Navy increased.

High-ranking officers in both Army and Navy privately express regret over Spaatz's attitude. They say that his line of thinking that all the nation needs is an Army air force is just as dangerous as proposing that all the country needs is a large Navy with plenty of carrier planes. Spaatz left the impression that not only the Navy should be eliminated but also the Army ground forces—that the Air Force could do the job alone in the future.

One listener asked Spaatz whether America could have captured Saipan without the Navy and he replied that we now have the island and there was no use discussing the issue.

He also was asked what would happen if America should tangle with Russia over the Kuriles and he replied that bombers would make the island chain untenable.

● ADMINISTRATION LEADERS face an uphill fight in the battle to extend price control which expires June 30.

Opposition spokesmen, led by witnesses from the National Manufacturers' association, struck some hard blows before the House Banking committee hearings and Democratic managers admit that the path to OPA extension is rockier than before.

Republicans and southern Democrats, who have teamed up on housing and other legislation, believe that they can drive through the House a bottled price control renewal measure that will contain these four limitations:

1. Termination of price control on Dec. 31, with authority granted the president to extend it for three additional months by executive order if necessary.
2. Machinery for abandonment of price ceilings on individual articles during the latter half of 1946 as soon as production of the articles reaches a particular point.
3. Gradual elimination of subsidies paid by the government to hold down food prices.
4. A provision that price ceilings shall be fixed high enough to permit cost of production plus a reasonable profit on each article.

● A HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED ANALYSIS by the bureau of labor statistics estimates the total of United States airlines employment five years after the end of the war at anywhere from 80,000 to 160,000 persons.

A figure somewhere within this range would compare with 22,000 employed at the end of 1940 and more than twice that number at the beginning of 1945.

The BLS soberly recognizes, however, that there will be "an over-supply" of labor in practically all aviation occupations.

The bureau foresees a maximum of 32,000 jobs for pilots both with airlines and in other fields by the fifth post-war year.

In contrast, there now are some 200,000 pilots in or being discharged from the armed forces.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS
By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 6—While the Soviet seems to be leisurely withdrawing its military army from Iran, it is leaving behind a political army which has an excellent chance of absorbing the country, as Britain and the U. S. have no armies on the ground, military or political.

Next possible Russian move may be to cut the nearest slice of Turkey already defined in the official Moscow journals. This is a thin slice running about 200 miles westward in length along the Black Sea with a depth of 75 to 100 miles inland. The Turks could not stop such a move without naval assistance from the British or us. Their frontier armies could easily be bypassed by Russian amphibious landings in their rear.

A late grapevine report to trustworthy authorities here indicates Russia is in no condition to try this, or any other major venture. Her casualty list from the war has not yet been published and no one knows how many she lost, although military men start their guesses at the astonishing total of 10,000,000 killed and their estimates run up to 20,000,000. At minimum, she is suffering a manpower shortage, made acute by critical shortages of farm tractors, locomotives and trucks to an extent where she cannot hope to supply her people with food and necessities. Economists noted Stalin's goals for the fourth five year plan, to end in 1950, were lower than his 1942 goals in pig iron, steel, oil, locomotives, freightcars, paper, leather and some other phases. In short, his figures suggest he will fall short of pre-war production after four more years—if figures can be trusted.

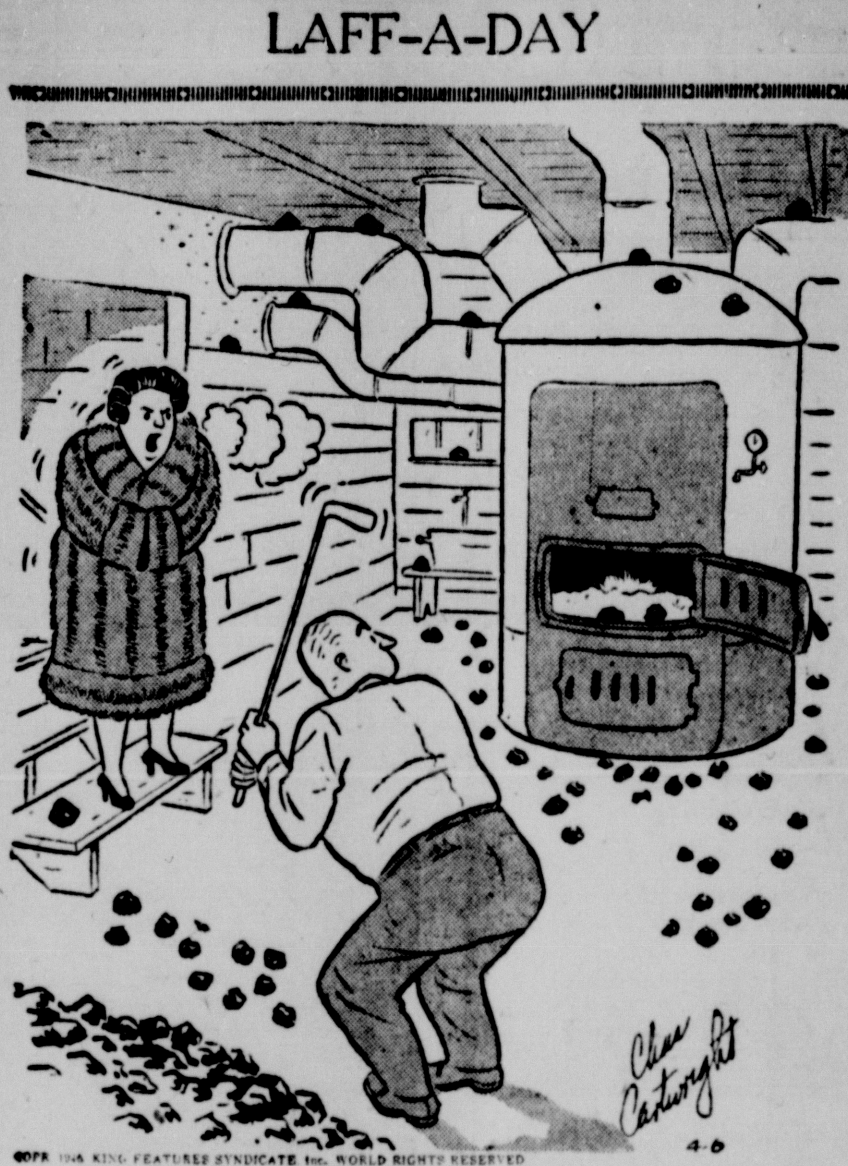

The formidable military line he is maintaining against us through western Hungary and northern Yugoslavia, with an advance outpost at Vienna, has been considered by some American military authorities to be a threat to us, but now they are beginning to wonder if it is not a sign of Russian weakness at home. Nearly 2,000,000 Russian troops were recently reported in this line of defense-in-depth—500,000 in Austria where no more than 50,000 could be used policing, if that many; 1,200,000 in back-up positions across Hungary and 250,000 Russian and Yugoslav troops facing the British a few miles back from the border of that nation. (How many additional millions the Russians have in Germany, Poland, Rumania and Bulgaria, no one knows, but our whole army around the world is probably now half the total Russian force.)

These Russian dispositions plainly suggest a defensive line to prevent invasion of the Balkans by United British and American forces. It has no other military value. But it could be adequately manned for such a purpose with one fourth the present forces. Why, then, is it there?

The answer commonly accepted on the inside here now is that Stalin cannot feed so many at home. His occupation army is bitterly resented in Hungary where it recently cut down its seizures of supplies from the people, but he has refused all our efforts for retrenchment and it is still taking food from the needy. Strangely, by leaving such a great force so long at the front, he has complicated his manpower problem at home. Demobilized they could work.

Of course this is not the first indication of Soviet socialist inefficiency. The Russians always solve their economic problems the political way, which seldom proves to be the right economic way. Hence, Russia can now be sending ship-

DIET AND HEALTH
Allergy As Disease-Producer

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MORE and more, doctors are coming to believe that allergy may play a primary role in producing disease. Allergy simply means individual over-sensitiveness to substances which are usually harmless. In other words, one person's body tissues may be irritated or even poisoned by something which leaves another perfectly sound.

Recently, Dr. Henry L. Williams of the Mayo Clinic has suggested that the distressing Meniere's Disease may be due to an allergy. This may prove a very hopeful theory because in the past, doctors have sought in vain for satisfactory treatment of this peculiar affliction.

Recurrent Dizziness
Occurring as a rule only in persons over 30 years of age, Meniere's Disease causes recurrent attacks of dizziness, in which objects seem to rotate, with temporary deafness in one ear, vomiting and a condition of the eyes known as nystagmus in which the eyes jerk rapidly to one side and then return slowly to the normal position.

Dr. Williams believes that as a result of some allergy, the tissues of the internal ear become swollen and this, in turn, brings on the symptoms of Meniere's Disease. He finds support for his idea in the fact that during an attack, patients exhibit an abnormal craving for salt, indicating that something has upset the body's metabolism, the basic process by which food and necessary liquids are turned into energy.

New Treatment
His new concept of Meniere's Disease led him to a new treatment. A number of patients were given niacin and potassium nitrate with lessening of the amount of salt and fluid in their diets. Niacin is a part of the vitamin B-complex. Of 62 patients treated for Meniere's disease, 50 were relieved of their symptoms merely by administering the niacin. When the salts and fluids in the diet were reduced and potassium nitrate given, those who are not benefited by the niacin alone, were benefited.

Doctor Williams suggests that the niacin be given by injection under the skin starting with a moderate sized dose and gradually increasing the quantity. The fluids are restricted to the equivalent of six glasses of water a day.

Gradual Deafness
Doctor Williams has found that in patients with Meniere's disease, deafness may gradually occur and that, at the same time, the patient develops such symptoms as running of the nose and severe headache. Whether or not the condition is due to an allergy, it would seem that the method of treatment proposed brings benefit to many patients.

It must be remembered, also, that not all persons who suffer from attacks of dizziness and deafness are suffering from Meniere's disease. These symptoms may be produced by other disorders affecting the internal ear, as well as a number of nervous disorders. However, when these symptoms occur, a careful study should be made to determine if they are due to Meniere's disease, in which event the treatment suggested would appear worth trying.

"Hm, yes, Hunt. Appropriate name the lad has," Claire yawned. "Also a swell physique and a face you'd love to touch."

I sounded funny from Claire. "I'm surprised! YOU falling for our psychological sleuth!" I teased her with a weak chuckle, and then, ashamed of being amused by anything under the circumstances, cuddled deeper into my chair in search of the lost position.

Something crackled as I moved. I put my hand down between the loose cushion and the back of the chair to see what had made the sound, and suddenly sat up straight, my stockings feet on the floor and every trace of drowsiness gone.

In my hand was a thin sheaf of letters, held together by an ordinary rubber band. Letters in Margot Ingalls' familiar hand, written on her equally familiar tin, stiff notepaper.

Words of Wisdom
To cultivate sympathy you must be among living beings and thinking about them; to cultivate admiration, among beautiful things and looking at them.—Ruskin.

Today's Horoscope
A birthday today means that you read a great deal and enjoy good literature. You are a good conversationalist, but do not care for light talk. You are quite domestic, and live very much within yourself. You are well liked for you are an interesting and entertaining person. Any change you would make early this morning would be permanent; don't start any important project at this time. Around 8 a. m. you can start the day with a smile. Don't quarrel around 9:30 a. m., as it would be all wrong. Setbacks may block your achievement about the middle of the morning, and around 1:30 p. m. you should be careful of electricity and motors. At 7:56 p. m. the moon favors financial deals.

Hints on Etiquette
At a formal dinner one would not indulge in personal foibles like mashing whole potatoes and then putting on gravy, or putting gravy on biscuits or bread. At an informal meal with friends you may do so if you wish.

Horoscope for Sunday
Today's birthday celebrant is an enthusiastic planner, and you carry out your plans in the easiest way rather than to a glorious finish. You love social life and enjoy entertaining. Your love is ardent and enduring. If you are awakened around 3:35 a. m., resolve to be calm in spite of the temptation to use words thoughtlessly. When it is nearly 6, if you happen to be awake, rash desires may lead to extravagance of emotions unless you control them. The moon enters Cancer at 7:24 a. m. Plan around noon for a pleasant evening if you cannot indulge in social pleasures in the afternoon. Odd impulses may overtake you early this evening; check them before they lead you astray.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, April 6
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ALTHOUGH there is encouragement from stellar operations to engage in fair opportunities for promoting the position, desires and ambitious objectives, yet there are, as well, signs of a stronger urge to dally by the wayside and indulge in certain dramatic or romantic adventures of more allure and less profit.

This suddenly precipitated opening may prove disruptive and devastating and create prodigality, extravagance and excesses of far-reaching and regrettable demerit. Refrain from squalls and squanderings.

If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is, although having opportunity for advancing the interests on solid foundations, with large scope and wide influence on future benefits, yet a lure to a sudden development in adventure, romance, change and innovation, may be too difficult to resist.

Also, it will stimulate to excesses, reckless use of funds and energies, with devastating and radical denouements. Keep balanced, discreet, secure.

A child born on this day may be clever, ambitious in certain directions, but wayward, extravagant, erratic and irresponsible unless given early discipline.

JUST THE RIGHT TIME
YOUR CARDS have variable value. Though a particular one seems worth just one trick to you as a trick-taker, it may have an extra value in preventing your opponent from taking a couple of other tricks if you use it at just the right time. On still other occasions, it can be worth a couple of tricks to refuse to take any trick at all with the card.

West put up a pretty defense against this contract. After leading his spade K and seeing the dummy, he immediately switched to the diamond J. South let it run to his K, then laid down the heart A and K, leaving the good Q out against him.

Next he led the spade 7, expecting West to come in with the marked A. If he had, the spade Q and J would then have been set up for discards of the club Q and 5. The diamond 7 could have been ruffed, so that the only tricks lost would have been two in spades and one to the heart Q.

But West did not play his A on that second round of spades. He sized up South as having held only two spades originally. If that was right, playing the A would have given South his contract. So West played low on the 7, and the Q won in dummy. Now West's A was doomed never to take a trick. But that play beat South's contract, as he now could not get any discards of clubs. As a result, the declarer lost two tricks in clubs, in addition to one in spades and one in hearts, so was set one.

General Sees No Reason For Support of the Navy
Price Control Extension To Be Bitterly Opposed

Special to Central Press

● HOLLYWOOD—Gen. Carl Spaatz, new Army Air Force chief, is a bitter, outspoken foe of the Navy and especially the Naval Air Force.

At a private dinner in Washington recently, Spaatz attacked the Navy in an "off-the-record" speech in which he told a group of aviation writers that he saw no reason why Congress should spend any money on the Navy.

It happened that a Navy admiral of lower rank than Spaatz was sitting at the head table when the general fired his broadside at the Navy. Of course, the admiral made his report to his superiors and the tension between the Army and Navy increased.

High-ranking officers in both Army and Navy privately express regret over Spaatz's attitude. They say that his line of thinking that all the nation needs is an Army air force is just as dangerous as proposing that all the country needs is a large Navy with plenty of carrier planes. Spaatz left the impression that not only the Navy should be eliminated but also the Army ground forces—that the Air Force could do the job alone in the future.

One listener asked Spaatz whether America could have captured Saipan without the Navy and he replied that we now have the island and there was no use discussing the issue.

He also was asked what would happen if America should tangle with Russia over the Kuriles and he replied that bombers would make the island chain untenable.

● ADMINISTRATION LEADERS face an uphill fight in the battle to extend price control which expires June 30. Opposition spokesmen, led by witnesses from the National Manufacturers' association, struck some hard blows before the House Banking committee hearings and Democratic managers admit that the path to OPA extension is rockier than before.

Republicans and southern Democrats, who have teamed up on housing and other legislation, believe that they can drive through the House a bottled price control renewal measure that will contain these four limitations:

1. Termination of price control on Dec. 31, with authority granted the president to extend it for three additional months by executive order if necessary.
2. Machinery for abandonment of price ceilings on individual articles during the latter half of 1946 as soon as production of the articles reaches a particular point.
3. Gradual elimination of subsidies paid by the government to hold down food prices.
4. A provision that price ceilings shall be fixed high enough to permit cost of production plus a reasonable profit on each article.

● A HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED ANALYSIS by the bureau of labor statistics estimates the total of United States airlines employment five years after the end of the war at anywhere from 80,000 to 160,000 persons.

A figure somewhere within this range would compare with 22,000 employed at the end of 1940 and more than twice that number at the beginning of 1945.

The BLS soberly recognizes, however, that there will be "an over supply" of labor in practically all aviation occupations.

Pickaway Garden Club Holds Annual Dinner

Loren Hill Speaks At Meeting In Lyle Home

Members of the Pickaway Garden Club met Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lyle for their annual cooperative dinner. About fifty members and guests were present.

The Lyle home was decorated with many artistic arrangements of Spring flowers. Most of the flowers were grown by Mrs. Fred Cook, who is a member of the club. A short business session was conducted by Mrs. G. Guy Campbell, president. A donation to the Red Cross was voted. It was voted not to send membership cards. Each member is asked to reply at the roll call of the next meeting and state whether or not he wishes to be a member for the coming year. Mrs. Campbell appointed Mrs. T. O. Gilliland, Mrs. Eli Roper and Mrs. Ella Hornbeck as a nominating committee.

A moment of silent tribute was observed in memory of the late Mrs. John Boggs. Mrs. Turney Pontius, program chairman, introduced Loren Hill, a member of the Kingston garden club. "Early Spring Planting" was the topic of Mr. Hill's talk. He has started landscaping his garden and discussed the various trees and shrubs for planting as well as the method of planting. He suggested that club members try one new kind of a plant or shrub each year. Mr. Hill advised that planting should start now for a Fall flower show. He also told of the boys and girls garden club in Kingston. He had charge of this group two years ago and told how the plots of ground were donated so that each youngster could have his own section. The result of this project was very gratifying, Mr. Hill stated.

Mrs. Hornbeck, Mrs. Clarence McAbee, Mrs. J. Sam Morris, assisted Mrs. Lyle. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Charles Pugsley, Washington township. Her committee will include Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, Mrs. E. O. Crites and Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer.

'CROSS' SERIES CONTINUED BY CALVARY PASTOR

"The Cross, the Only Reasonable Solution to the Sin Problem" is the subject of the Sunday morning sermon at Calvary Evangelical church.

The Rev. B. F. Borcoman continues his pre-Easter messages on "The Cross in Christian Experience." "Though there have been many fantastic movements and gyrations as well as claims made by the church through the ages, God's revelation of himself in Christ and his claims upon humanity are truly most reasonable in the light of open-minded logic," the Rev. Mr. Borcoman states. "Be reasonable, honor God and his Christ by attending your church regularly."

Calvary choir will sing the anthem "God is Near."

There will be no evening service at Calvary this Sunday because of a joint meeting at St. Paul's Evangelical church under the auspices of the Evangelical Brotherhood of Circleville and Stoutsville churches.

The Brotherhood will have complete charge of the service. Kenneth McGrath will be the speaker. The Brotherhood chorus will sing. The pastor urges all who would normally attend the evening service at Calvary to make arrangements to meet at St. Paul's for this service.

A birthday gift was presented to Mrs. Noble Barr by the members. Contests were held during the meeting and prizes were awarded to Mrs. Russell Skaggs and Mrs. James Arledge.

Refreshments were served at tables decorated with "Happy Birthday" cloths.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Gail Wolfe, Pleasant street, Friday, April 26.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Kent, and W. H. Garrison, Pensacola, Florida, visited for several days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Stonerock and family, Town street.

The name of the musical instrument called the oboe comes from the Italian oboe, French hautbois, English hautboy, high wood, so called from the high notes of the instrument.

"Why the Cross?" will be the sermon for Passion Sunday in the Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Carl L. Kennedy will use as his text, Matthew 16:21 (Revised Standard Version)—"From that time Jesus began to show his disciples that he must go to Jerusalem and suffer many things from the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and on the third day be raised."

Mrs. Ray Davis will be the soloist, singing the selection, "Sheep and Lambs" by Homer. Miss Abbe Mills Clarke will play "Cradle Song" by Kreisler, "Cantilena" by Archer, and Cadman's "Postlude in C."

'ALL - SUFFICIENT CHRIST' THEME AT U. B. CHURCH

"The All-Sufficient Christ" is the theme of the Passion Sunday Lenten service sermon of the Rev. Carl L. Wilson, pastor of the First United Brethren Church, Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. By reading the first chapter of Colossians, a scriptural foundation may be laid for a better appreciation for the message. At the same hour the Junior Church meets in the Children's Chapel for a worship service.

At the 7:30 o'clock evening evangelistic service, the Rev. Wilson will speak on the topic, "Uncomfortable Rest," with the text recorded in Isaiah 28:20.

Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock, a visual, education, sound motion picture, "The Beggar of Jerusalem," will be shown as the concluding feature of the Lenten "Family Night" services, which has been conducted each Wednesday night during Lent. This soul stirring picture is a gripping story of the beggar, blind from birth, who sat outside the gates of the temple and was miraculously healed by Jesus. This presentation is fundamentally scriptural as recorded in the Gospel according to St. John, Chapter 9. The public is invited to attend this service.

Palm Sunday at the morning worship the pastor will administer the rite of baptism by sprinkling and receive a class into church membership.

The theme of the sermon for this midweek Lenten service will be "Our Dying Redeemer's First Word From the Cross." Text is taken from St. Luke's gospel chapter 23, verse 34.

Immediately following the Lenten service Wednesday evening the final doctrinal lecture will be presented in the church auditorium.

Sunday at 7 p. m. public examination of the junior catechetical class will be held in the Church auditorium. The public is invited.

Sunday at 8:15 p. m. public preaching service will be held at Christ Lutheran church, Lick Run.

Directed by Miss Beatrice Sprague, the senior choir will sing for the anthem "Almighty God Unto Whom All Hearts Be Open" by James Pears. Mrs. Ervin Leist will play for her organ numbers "Liedchen" by Mendelssohn and "The Gregorian Easter Hymn" by St. Gregory.

Holy Week services will be observed at the Methodist church. The Youth Fellowship, including the youth department of the church school, will be in charge of the program and services.

REV. FILBRUN AT CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN

The Rev. Parker M. Filbrun of Dayton will speak at the Church of the Brethren Sunday evening at 7:30.

In 1933 the Rev. Mr. Filbrun visited Palestine and spent Palm Sunday and Holy Week including Easter in Palestine, the land where the Bible was written. In 1937 he again visited Palestine when making a trip around the world. The Christian Herald sponsored the world tour. He also visited some of the mission stations in India that are operated by The Church of the Brethren. His world tour was the last such trip before the beginning of the last war.

His program Sunday evening will include special pictures taken on these trips with special emphasis on Palestine, India and Elvira. This will be an unusual opportunity for the people of Circleville to see and hear something from the land where Jesus lived and it ought to be especially appreciated just now as we are looking toward Holy Week and Easter.

Excerpt from Teachings of Baha'u'llah, Founder of the Baha'i Faith

"The All-Knowing Physician hath His finger on the pulse of mankind. He perceiveth the disease, and prescribeth, in His unerring wisdom, the remedy. Every age hath its own problem, and every soul its particular aspiration. The remedy the world needeth in the remedy the world needeth in never be the same as that which a subsequent age may require. Be anxiously concerned with the needs of the age ye live in, and center your deliberations on its exigencies and requirements."

VERN STEPHENS TO JOIN BROWNS

Infielder Jumps Mexican Contract, Heads Back Into American Loop

NEW YORK, April 6—Traffic on the Mexican-United States border became a two-way proposition today as Vern Stephens, who jumped to the Mexican baseball league last week, apparently was enroute back to the forsaking St. Louis Browns, while Max Butcher fretted to get out of the U. S.

Richard Muckerman, president of the Browns, happily announced Stephens' change of heart last night, adding that the 28-year-old shortstop might get into today's exhibition game if Manager Luke Sewell saw fit to use him. There was little doubt that Sewell would. Stephens was the team's best hitter in 1945.

At Monterrey, Mexico, Manager Ramon Bragana of the Vera Cruz Blues confirmed that Stephens was missing from Mexico. He said that Stephens didn't show up for practice yesterday, and was reported to have crossed the border into Texas. Muckerman said he talked to Stephens by telephone from San Antonio, and that the shortstop said he had signed his St. Louis contract.

Stephens had been a holdout, asking a $4,500 boost from his $13,000 salary of 1945. When he couldn't come to terms with the Browns, he signed a five-year contract with the Pasquel brothers, owners of the Mexican league. Terms were not made public, but the brothers said they would give Stephens what he wanted.

Stephens has played in several games in Mexico, but is still eligible for major league play if he joins the Browns before opening day.

The good news for the Mexicans was the open intention of Max Butcher, former Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher, to go to Mexico as soon as he can make a good deal. Butcher, who won 10 games for the Pirates last season, hinted he would leave within a few days—"as soon as they up the ante." He is asked more than the three-year contract at $7,000 per year which has been offered. He was unconditionally released by the Pirates when he wouldn't accept their offer of $8,000 per year.

At Clearwater, Fla., Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians said he had an offer to become a player-manager but refused. However, he said he wouldn't be surprised if two of his players, sub infielders Bias Monaco and Mickey Rocco, jump to the Mexicans.

With repeal the still disappeared from the farm, So Pie-Eye went on the wagon. He got religion in a big way and now makes his home in the belfry of an abandoned church building.

NELSON MAY BE SLIPPING IN MASTERS EVENT

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 6—The big question here today was whether Byron Nelson, rated the greatest among present day golfers, had reached his peak and was on the down grade or whether the Toledo terror of the links was just finding the tough Masters tournament course too much for even his tournament-tested nerves to conquer.

Nelson stands eight strokes back of Herman Keiser of Akron, O., at the half-way mark and if Keiser, who has fired a 69 and a 68 for a 36-hole total of 137 can just shoot par golf the rest of the way out, Nelson would have to come roaring down the stretch with a pair of 67's even to tie him.

Little Ben Hogan, of Hershey, Pa., on the other hand, apparently found himself yesterday with a 70 that included two brilliant eagles and the boys who make golf a business now are banking on either Hogan or Jimmy Thomson, of Los Angeles, who hits the ball a country mile, to overtake Keiser and win the choice $10,000 Masters' tournament.

Thomson and Hogan both came through with 70's yesterday with Thomson moving into second position with a 142 total for 36 holes and Hogan pulling up into a tie for fourth with 144 strokes at the end of two rounds.

VERNON STEPHENS TO JOIN BROWNS

Infielder Jumps Mexican Contract, Heads Back Into American Loop

NEW YORK, April 6—Traffic on the Mexican-United States border became a two-way proposition today as Vern Stephens, who jumped to the Mexican baseball league last week, apparently was enroute back to the forgoing St. Louis Browns, while Max Butcher fretted to get out of the U. S.

Richard Muckerman, president of the Browns, happily announced Stephens' change of heart last night, adding that the 28-year-old shortstop might get into today's exhibition game if Manager Luke Sewell saw fit to use him. There was little doubt that Sewell would. Stephens was the team's best hitter in 1945.

At Monterrey, Mexico, Manager Ramon Bragana of the Vera Cruz Blues confirmed that Stephens was missing from Mexico. He said that Stephens didn't show up for practice yesterday, and was reported to have crossed the border into Texas. Muckerman said he talked to Stephens by telephone from San Antonio, and that the shortstop said he had signed his St. Louis contract.

Stephens had been a holdout, asking a $4,500 boost from his $13,000 salary of 1945. When he couldn't come to terms with the Browns, he signed a five-year contract with the Pasquel brothers, owners of the Mexican league. Terms were not made public, but the brothers said they would give Stephens what he wanted.

Stephens has played in several games in Mexico, but is still eligible for major league play if he joins the Browns before opening day.

The good news for the Mexicans was the open intention of Max Butcher, former Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher, to go to Mexico as soon as he can make a good deal. Butcher, who won 10 games for the Pirates last season, hinted he would leave within a few days, "as soon as they up the ante." He is asked more than the three-year contract at $7,000 per year which has been offered. He was unconditionally released by the Pirates when he wouldn't accept their offer of $8,000 per year.

At Clearwater, Fla., Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians said he had an offer to become a player-manager but refused. However, he said he wouldn't be surprised if two of his players, sub infielders Blas Monaco and Mickey Rocco, jump to the Mexicans.

With repeal the still disappeared from the farm, So Pie-Eye went on the wagon. He got religion in a big way and now makes his home in the belfry of an abandoned church building.

A regular observer of the UNO meetings in New York, Shirer has covered the Security Council since its first historic opening. Regarding one phase of the American view represented at the conference, the commentator had this to say: "We stood up for an ancient Anglo-Saxon conception of law. We wanted all nations to enjoy a certain equality in the UNO. At the very least, we insisted that they should at all times have the right to be heard." About the much discussed veto-power, Shirer called attention to the fact: "Actually, we insisted on it as much as the Russians in any settlement which might lead to the use of force by UNO. It was the only way we could protect our national sovereignty. It was also the only way we could get the Senate to approve our membership in UNO."

Veterans Warned Of Possible Dangers Of Going Into Business

OPA SUGGESTS PRICE CHECKS BE MADE FIRST

Ex-Servicemen Face Chance Of Losing Money Unless Investigation Made

Circleville area war veterans who plan to buy a business were warned Saturday by the Cincinnati district office of the Office of Price Administration to take precautions to avoid a losing venture.

The OPA officials suggested that discharged GI's contemplating taking over restaurants, lunch rooms, or other retail establishments, or service businesses such as garages, cleaning and pressing shops, and parking lots, should investigate carefully the lawful ceiling prices they are authorized to charge before making the purchase.

Unless the owner who sells a business has filed prices with the local price control board, the OPA pointed out, the prices are not lawfully established. Upon discovery of this the OPA must reduce those prices to those in line with comparable establishments.

"Don't take the selling owner's word for his authorized ceiling prices," the OPA warned war veterans. "Go to your price control board and check the prices on file."

"In case of doubt be sure to consult the OPA district office at Cincinnati. Otherwise you may find the business a lot less profitable than the owner indicated to you."

As an example the OPA spokesmen cited the case of a Cincinnati veteran who, when he purchased a restaurant recently, relied on the previous owner's statement that his price ceiling for a plate lunch was 65 cents.

Upon filing his prices with his local board—as each successive owner is required to do—the veteran discovered that his ceiling price for plate lunches was only 45 cents.

"That veteran was faced with a much different situation than he had expected," the OPA officials commented.

The warning called attention to the fact that under OPA regulations the maximum prices which restaurants may charge are those that were charged during the week of April 4 to 10 in 1943.

The maximum prices that may legally be charged by service establishments are those which were charged during March, 1942. For all businesses opened after those dates OPA approval must be obtained for prices charged.

MINIMUM WAGE BILL DOOMED, LEADERS ADMIT

WASHINGTON, April 6—Senate determination to raise farm parity prices today put the kiss of death on the administration's minimum wage bill.

For the second time within a week the senate voted last night that the administration-sponsored minimum wage bill should include an amendment forcing a simultaneous raise in the price of farm products.

As a result, senate leaders agreed the bill must die in congress or face a certain presidential veto. Although they went through the formality of continuing to consider and amend the measure, they saw no hope of writing it into law this year.

The farm price amendment—requiring the farm labor costs be included in computing parity prices—was adopted last night by a vote of 46 to 38. The action was a surprise and a setback to a group of senators who had spent a week devising a compromise on the industrial wage minimum.

The senate accepted, 76 to 6, their agreement to increase the minimum wage from 40 cents to 60 cents an hour effective nine months after the act became law.

CONGRESS TO BE ASKED TO VOTE ON JOINT STAFF

WASHINGTON, April 6—A senate military affairs subcommittee will ask congress to give permanent status to the wartime joint chiefs-of-staff, it was learned today.

The proposal is contained in a bill to merge the armed forces into a single department of common defense.

During the war, the late President Roosevelt set up the temporary four-member joint chiefs-of-staff to coordinate major decisions over use of the fighting forces. The group, without clearly defined powers, made decisions only after unanimous agreement.

The board now consists of Army Chief of Staff Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, Air Forces Commander Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, and Adm. William D. Leahy, chief-of-staff to the President.

The province of Nova Scotia surpasses all other provinces, except British Columbia, and all the states of the continent in the annual value of its fish output.

FARM PRACTICE FORMS SENT OUT

Farmers Urged To Retain For Reference New AAA Blanks

Farmers of Pickaway county who have signed farm plans indicating their intention to participate in the 1946 agricultural conservation program are now receiving Form NCR-46-17, "Notice of Approved Practices and Report of Performance."

According to Dewey Downs of the Pickaway County AAA Office, it is important that farmers keep this form for future reference. On it have been listed the conservation practices that have been approved for the farm, the extent to which such practices have been approved, and the amount of payment that may be earned by performance.

Upon receipt of this formal notice of approval farmers may proceed with their 1946 conservation plans with the assurance that payments may be earned as thereon indicated.

In some instances the final approved practices differ somewhat from the farmer's request or the original community committee recommendations.

It should be remembered, however, that these adjustments were necessary to provide equitable practice approvals for each farm on the basis of conservation needs and other factors, and to keep the maximum payment approved for all participating farms within the amount of money allotted to this county for conservation purposes.

Mr. Downs stated. They were made by the county and community committees working together in a review of all Farm Plans, and they represent a sincere effort in a fair administration of the intent and purpose of the program, he said.

Veterans Warned Of Possible Dangers Of Going Into Business

OPA SUGGESTS PRICE CHECKS BE MADE FIRST

Ex-Servicemen Face Chance Of Losing Money Unless Investigation Made

Circleville area war veterans who plan to buy a business were warned Saturday by the Cincinnati district office of the Office of Price Administration to take precautions to avoid a losing venture.

The OPA officials suggested that discharged GI's contemplating taking over restaurants, lunch rooms, or other retail establishments, or service businesses such as garages, cleaning and pressing shops, and parking lots, should investigate carefully the lawful ceiling prices they are authorized to charge before making the purchase.
